SCHEDULE 4—PROCEDURE FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMUNITY HEALTH UNITS

An appropriate system and criteria requires that internationally accepted standards and procedures be used in determining administrative units. The accepted standards have to take into consideration political, socio-economic, cultural and other factors within a given unit of administration. Notwithstanding this, there is need for openness, accuracy and objectivity in determining units. In Kenya, The IEBC in 2012 Delimitation of Boundaries of Constituencies and Wards utilized critical factor of population density in determining units to be established. This is viewed as skewed in the case of Elgeyo/Marakwet County as geographical distance is very critical in delivery of service to the people. In the proposed delimitation of the Elgeyo/Marakwet County Community Health Units critical consideration was placed on population sizes of the current locations and sub locations, land size and topographical zones. These critical factors have been addressed by using existing villages as a base for determination of the number of community health units per Sub County and number of community health volunteers per community health unit. The outcome of this balance between equitable delivery of community health services relative to population and the effort to reverse the trends of marginalization for the sparsely populated areas that occupy the remotest periphery of the County is in the second schedule of this Act. The baseline population data utilized in the determination of the proposed community health units is in the Kenya Population Census, 2009 figures.
